Comments:

I understand that the Judicial Conference Committee is considering changes to the F.R.C.P. that will prevent discovery of documents stored on a Party's computers. That sounds like a truly TERRIBLE idea. As technology progresses, I know that I am storing more and more of my documents on my computers, in digital form, ONLY. I have to assume that more and more organizations (especially large corporations) are doing the same. Under the proposed rules, parties could insulate themselves from discovery simply by digitizing. Digital records are the records of the future. If discovery is to be meaningful in the 21st Century, it has to include complete access to an opponents non-privileged digital records.
