Comments:

I represent a defendant in a contractual dispute in a diversity action. The terms of the contract were vague and the parties' e-mail communications supplied important guidance for the Court's determination. The e-mails were found by all parties involved in the case, after certain effort. I am concerned that proposed Rule 26(b)(2) would have allowed a party in my case to claim that the relevant e-mails were not easily accessible. Without the e-mails, the Court would not have been about to fully consider of
