Please approve the proposed rules. I find that it's impossible for a debtor to propose a Chapter 13 plan when he/she can't get a finite number from a lender stating "this is how much you owe..." And a proof of claim with a single sheet summary is impossible to vet in a Chapter 13, so one either objects or accepts it, without knowing if it's correct or not. Either case, I can't represent my debtors intelligently or honestly. These are both flaws in the bankruptcy system that should be corrected.
